"Any journey, except the one on foot, is in my opinion a journey on foreign legs; to have at your disposal the seat of a train, the wheels of a carriage, or the legs of a horse means to travel sitting and to see only what is given to you, but not everything your heart desires."

What is the Camino de Santiago pilgrimage route?

Camino de Santiago or the Way of Saint James is a network of Christian pilgrimage routes, traversed since the Middle Ages, which attract pilgrims from all over Europe, and which are annually covered by approximately 350,000 people from 160 countries. These routes have as their terminus the town of Santiago de Compostela, the capital of the Galicia region in northwestern Spain, where the tomb of the holy apostle James the Great is located. Since 1987, the Camino de Santiago has gained the status of European Cultural Itinerary, being a network of roads that spans the entire continent. The historical importance of the pilgrimage was recently recognized by UNESCO, which declared it a World Heritage Site.

Why go on this pilgrimage?

There are numerous reasons to go on this pilgrimage. Since the Middle Ages, pilgrims have sought salvation through repentance. Some embarked on pilgrimage to fulfill a sentence, while others did so on behalf of others to earn money. After the decline of pilgrimage known since the fifteenth century, due to plagues and religious wars, we nowadays witness a true rebirth of the phenomenon. The nature, tranquility, and simplicity of this route make those who traverse it feel the desire to return. Motivated by the desire to find God or simply as a personal challenge born of curiosity to explore the world or interest in the route, heritage, culture, or sport, the pilgrim is on the verge of having a truly unforgettable experience.

Camino de România – Neamț County

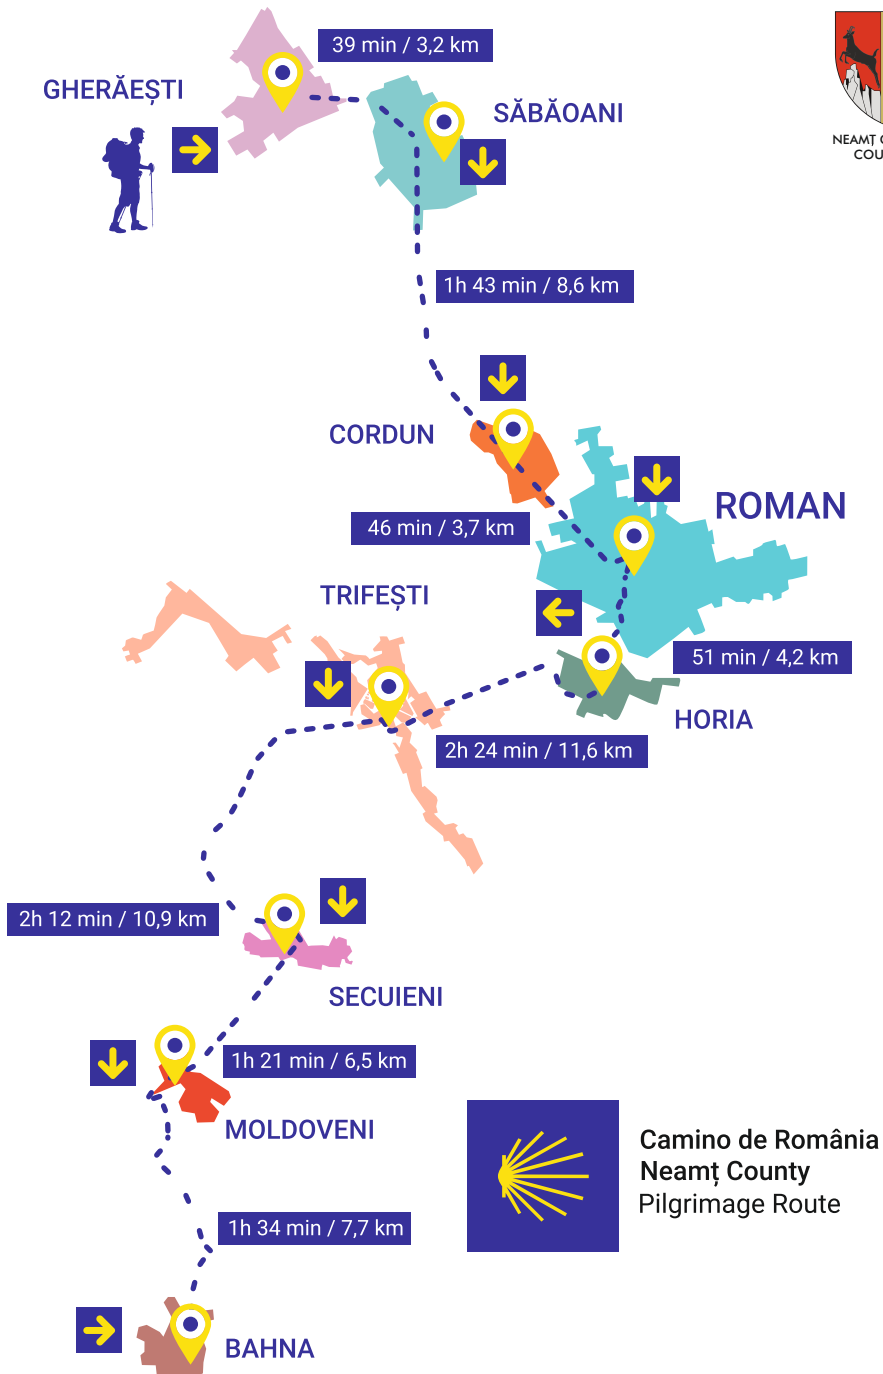

Upon his arrival in Romania in 2019, Pope Francis blessed the first Camino de România milestone in Iași, which symbolically marks the starting point of the 4500 km route to Santiago de Compostela, Spain. In the eastern part of the European continent, the Camino de Santiago pilgrimage route is named Camino de România and starts from Iași, crosses Neamț and Bacău counties, then passes through the mountains into Transylvania, through Covasna County. The Camino de România crosses Neamț County through the Roman area, starting from the north, from the village of Gherăești, Gherăești commune, and descending south to the village of Izvoare, Bahna commune. The connection with Iași County is through the village of Iugani, and with Bacău County through the village of Racova.

How is the route marked?

The route is marked with signage plates, mounted on poles or various structures, on which the golden scallop shell – a specific symbol of the Camino de Santiago route, and yellow arrows, indicating the direction of travel, are depicted, placed on a dark blue background. A myth says that pilgrims of yore used shells to drink water from springs while traversing the route. Additionally, priests would offer them a half shell upon their arrival at the Cathedral, at the completion of the journey. Today, the shell is the most commonly encountered symbol on the Camino de Santiago, being the identifying mark of any pilgrim, worn around the neck or attached to the backpack. Milestones are also installed along the pilgrimage route, marking the remaining distance to the end of the Camino de Santiago, as well as panels with information about the traversed localities.

Physical and Mental Preparation

The routes of the Camino de Santiago, respectively Camino de România – Neamț County, involve several days of walking, covering distances of 20-30 km per day, therefore, prior preparation is crucial. The earlier you start physical preparation, the better. It is recommended to take regular walks of 25-30 minutes, three times a week, alternating days and combining walking with jogging.

In addition to physical preparation, mental preparation is equally important for this journey. The motivation for traversing the route must be established, and attention must be focused on achieving personal goals.

Necessary Equipment

It is said that on the Camino de Santiago, you can tell where a traveler started from the size of their luggage, which is inversely proportional to the length of the route traveled: for a shorter distance, the luggage can be larger, but for those covering hundreds of kilometers, backpacks are smaller and contain only the essentials.

Backpack. It is recommended to have a backpack with a capacity corresponding to a weight that does not exceed 10% of the pilgrim's body weight and to have as many compartments and pockets as possible, for easier use of necessary items during walking.

Water container. Hydration is extremely important, so one or two water or tea containers should not be missing. Clothing should be limited to the essentials and worn in several thin layers.

Footwear. Consideration should be given primarily to the season but also to the difficulty of the route. Footwear should be soft, without a rigid sole, and as ventilated as possible. In cold months, waterproof footwear is recommended, protecting against cold and humidity. In warm months, lighter boots or even mountain sandals are recommended. A pair of lightweight slippers are necessary for breaks or in accommodation areas, to allow the foot to relax and recover. It is very important not to use new footwear to avoid foot injuries.

Snacks. Along the way, cafes, bakeries, shops, restaurants, etc. can be found. However, depending on the number of meals per day and the number of calories each pilgrim needs, stocking up on snacks for the proposed route is recommended.

Rain poncho. A foldable rain poncho with a hood and wide enough to cover the backpack, if it does not already have protection, is recommended.

First aid kit. Even though there are pharmacies along the route, it is recommended to stock up from home with creams, sprays, and everything necessary to avoid blisters or chafing, as well as insects.

Documents. A smaller backpack can be useful for keeping valuables such as documents, glasses, money, or phone.

Optionally, you can take: a walking stick, a flashlight, earplugs, a sleeping bag, or a sheet. Also useful could be: a cup, a spoon, a knife, a map, and possibly a GPS compass, a match, or a lighter.

gherăești commune

The village of Gherăești is the first on the Camino de România route in Neamț County. It is the seat village of Gherăești commune and is located about 20 km from the city of Roman. The first document that directly refers to the Gherăești estate, actually attesting the existence of the community, is a charter dated April 25, 1552, by which the Moldavian ruler Ștefan Rareș, son of Petru Rareș, declared an exchange of villages made by his father with the bishop of Roman at that time, Macarie, thus reinforcing the ownership of the Roman Episcopate over this village. Settlement in the commune's territory is also attested by the archaeological site from much earlier times: a settlement from the 2nd century BC – 1st century AD and a necropolis from the 15th – 18th centuries. Catholics predominate here, with the first mention of them in this community dating back to 1745.

SĂBĂOANI COMMUNE

Săbăoani is the largest Catholic village in Moldavia and the seat of Săbăoani commune, one of the oldest rural settlements in Neamț County. The legend of the formation of Săbăoani commune can be found in the pages of a manuscript called "The Chronicle of Săbăoani", a monograph created by Petre Sescu (The Forester). Today's Săbăoani commune was formed from the old village of Berindești, located "on the ridge of the hill from where you could embrace with your gaze and see with the naked eye the entire Siret Valley, with its gentle plains...". The name of the village, the author shows, comes from the Turkish word "berindei", given by the Turks to the streams that plowed this land. Four archaeological sites dating back to the Bronze and Eneolithic Age - the Cucuteni Culture, have been discovered within the commune's area, which are included in the list of historical monuments in Neamț County. In Săbăoani, 98.55% of the inhabitants are Roman Catholics.

ROMAN CITY

Located in the heart of the historical region of Moldavia, Roman is mentioned for the first time in the Novgorod Chronicle, dated around 1387, and in Nestor's chronicle, the first internal document being a donation charter from March 30, 1392. Roman represents a true treasure trove of historical relics that prove the importance of this center of Moldavia, remnants from different times (Paleolithic, Neolithic, etc.) attesting to millennia-old settlements in the area, dating back to the Bronze Age. Here, Alexander the Blessed established an Archbishopric in the period 1408-1413, which also served as the Metropolis of Roman and Lower Moldavia.

"DESCENT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT" ORTHODOX CHURCH - FORMER ARMENIAN CHURCH

The significant Armenian community in the Middle Ages on the territory of Roman led to the construction of a spacious stone church in 1609. Since the Armenian community in Roman consisted of only a few families, and the church that had been abandoned began to deteriorate, the Archbishopric of Roman obtained, in March 1981, from the Archbishopric of Armenians in Bucharest, the transfer of the building "for provisional unlimited use."

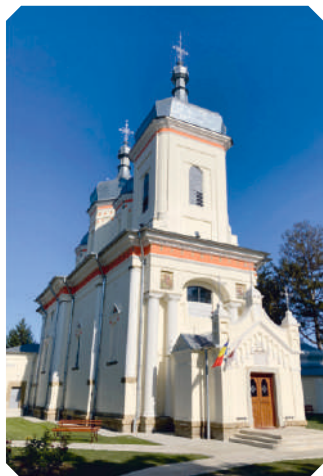

This church was built on the site of an old church bought from the Saxons in 1355 and has a remarkable architecture that strikes with its beauty and elegance. Built on a cruciform plan, the church is equipped with 19 windows and two stone-carved domes, and all these elements offer elegance and slenderness to the entire building.

The "Saint George" Church in Roman is a place whose long history is linked to the fortress-city of Roman, which was for a certain period (from the 15th century to the 19th century) the most important military, ecclesiastical, and economic center of Lower Country of Moldavia. Despite not being very large, with its slender and harmonious forms, the "St. George" Church creates the impression of monumentality. Its body has an impressive volume and is symmetrically composed in the Russian neoclassical style, with a nave shape and four slender domes, the architectural plans being brought from Odessa by the founder Grigore Done, originally from the Hotin County.

ENSEMBLE OF THE ARCHBISHOPRIC CHURCH IN ROMAN

The Archbishopric Cathedral "Saint Paraskeva" of Roman, built between 1542 - 1550 by Prince Petru Rareș, is a historical and religious monument whose architecture is typical of the 16th century, continuing the constructive-decorative solutions of the architects and craftsmen of Stephen the Great. The ecclesiastical complex, whose current painting has artistic forms belonging to the late Renaissance and European Baroque, also includes a chapel, cells, the Bell Tower, and the Episcopal Palace built in 1870. The church, dedicated on October 14th, houses the unique icon of the Protectress of Moldavia, Saint Paraskeva.

The tower has 5 levels, the first two housing the archive of the episcopate, and the next three containing one of the richest documentary libraries (approximately 20,000 volumes, 700 old Romanian, Slavonic, and Greek books, complemented by 91 manuscripts from various epochs and in different languages). Within this complex, in the museum arranged in the courtyard of the Episcopal Church in Roman, a series of objects with a special historical value are exhibited, constituting true treasures of Romanian art and testimonies of an ancient Orthodox devotion: pieces belonging to the categories of embroidery, silverware, and wood carving.

TRIFEȘTI COMMUNE

MAP

The first appearance of the name “Trifești” is recorded on January 21, 1588, in a sales record, when Grigore buys with 75 zlotys the shares of the son of Stancăi from Roșiori. Witnesses to this transaction were Crimățui and Tolea from Trifești. A document that supports this claim is the one in which Voivode Alexandru Iliaș confirms on November 2, 1632, to his boyar Dumitru Buhuș, the third chancellor, “the village of Niculești, called Trifeștii, with a pond and mills on the Black Stream”. According to the historian D. Ciurea, in 1675, the village of Trifești was part of the district of the fortress of Târgu Neamț.

“SAINT NICHOLAS” CHURCH IN TRIFEȘTI

The place of worship has a nave shape on the outside and is built of stone and brick, covered with sheet metal. It also features an imposing dome housing three bells. The interior of the church is cross-shaped. Over time, its founders and their descendants have adorned the holy place and donated numerous religious objects. The church preserves the Holy Icon of the Mother of God, adorned in silver, which has a special history passed down from generation to generation. It is the only miracle-working icon in the Archdiocese of Roman and Bacău located in a parish church. Another point of interest for visitors to the village of Trifești is the Shepherd's Tomb, located in the village schoolyard. According to tradition, the shepherd who saved the icon from turbulent waters is said to have been buried there.

SECUIENI COMMUNE

MAP

The name Secuieni appears for the first time as “Sacuiani” in 1448, July 27, in a deed of gift from Petru Voivode, the ruler of Moldavia, to Ion Porcu, a faithful servant, offering him 24 villages. Some of these villages have disappeared over time or have been affiliated with other communes. Some documents older than 1448 prove that the village of Secuieni is much older than its mention in charters, especially since older objects have been discovered on its territory: a stone hammer dating back to the Stone Age, a silver coin from 1408, and the archaeological site at Butnărești, point “La Chiuaru” - settlement and necropolis from the 2nd -3rd centuries AD.

MOLDOVENI COMMUNE

MAP

Moldoveni commune has been documented since 1448 when its lands were granted to the official of the Moldavian Council, Ion (Oană) Porcu. By the end of the 15th century, the existence of the village of Porcești was well established, along with the neighboring villages Brebi and Hociungi. The evolution of the economic, social, and demographic life of the villages of Moldoveni and Hociungi is attested by documents issued in the second half of the 16th century and the first half of the 17th century. Between 1630 and 1648, the inhabitants of Porcești sold their properties or parts thereof to the brothers Iurașcu and Gheorghe Bașotă and to the great chamberlain of the Lower Country of Moldavia, with great influence during the reign of Vasile Lupu, so that by the end of the 18th century, there were only peasant serfs left in the commune. Archaeological excavations have discovered traces of a Cucuteni Culture settlement from the Bronze Age and a necropolis from the 2nd - 4th centuries AD, cultural landmarks included in the list of historical monuments.

BAHNA COMMUNE

Bahna commune is located in the southeast part of Neamț County and is traversed by the pilgrimage route through four villages: Bahna, Broșteni, Băhnișoara, and Izvoare, the latter being the crossing point to Bacău County (the locality of Racova). In recent decades, numerous archaeological remains have been discovered in Bahna Commune and its surroundings, demonstrating that in this microregion, the beginnings of human life date back to the dawn of history in the ancient Dacian space. Traces of habitation from the Eneolithic period, belonging to the great Cucuteni cultural complex, have been unearthed through surface surveys and chance discoveries in several points across the microregion. Nearby, to the east of Bahna and at Aldești, systematic archaeological research has been conducted in a settlement belonging to the Cucuteni culture, with a history spanning over 5,000 years.

In the subsequent era of Thracian-Geto-Dacian history and civilization, the microregion where Bahna Commune is situated was densely populated. Evidence of habitation from the Bronze Age as well as from the early Iron Age has been found in other areas within the commune. Even in the centuries following the Roman abandonment of Dacia, the indigenous population continued to live in several settlements within the microregion where the nucleus of Bahna Commune lies.
